and handicapped in "peculiar" ways in that they had to live in the same house as Negroes in a few white developments.

The city of Tulsa doubled its population in four years and in 1920 it was about 100,000, of whom 60,000, these 10,000 were Negroes, approximately 6,000 of them left the city as a result of the riots, but a few hundred Negroes have returned, so there are now about 50,000 Negroes here.

They have drawn back to the Negro wages are there. "Nowhere in all the Southwest, Mr. Buckley said, were conditions of labor so attractive. Domestic service pays well, Negroes are well paid in mines. Before the riots common labor brought $2 to $3 a day, any of the Negroes even of the middle class, with the exception of the rich were wealthy. Nevertheless, the funds they had "did not live up to their promise."

Businessmen now would not have met the high prices exacted from returning groves now.

Mr. Buckley who had been there to help to rebuild his home and theater, and borrowed $25,000 for the purpose. But the leases were not renewed and the building stands unfinished. According to the new price schedule $25,000 was enough.

Some of the Negroes, however, have been able to negotiate loans at security, merely no good information, or the prospect of protection.

Mr. Buckley, who also did social work for the league in East St. Louis after the riot, arrived, arrived from St. Louis, where the racial and martial law was in force and groves were obliged to have a card order to pass out of the colored order.

Some of the Negroes, however, have been able to negotiate loans at security, merely no good information, or the prospect of protection.

The Negroes of Tulsa had developed a super-sense of race pride," he claimed. "They felt that they could live up to their responsibilities in the eyes of the citizens of the city, and the laxity of law enforcement encouraged this participation of places of vice, and such houses the Negroes had in the colored community.

The Negroes of Tulsa, he said, had never met. You go your way and I'll go mine—that was the motto of the colored community, and the pride of the citizens of the intelligent and liberal residents was rarely pricked by that outrage.

They were the races could not be anything else but dangerous and destructive. Four white organizations, the Negroes had in the colored community.

I. S. Stribling Tells Why
He Wrote "Birthright".

Associated Negro Press

NEW YORK, N. Y., Aug. 2.—T. S. Stribling, author of "Birthright," in replying to the inquiry of the honorable W. W. Wilcox, Chairman of the Board to Trustees of Tuskegee Institute, says:

"A number of persons have asked me for the old story of 'Birthright'.

"The general idea of the story and review was to make out of 'Birthright' a straightforward discussion of Negro education.

"Now for me to make out of 'Birthright' a straightforward discussion of Negro education, would be like the wise who say that 'the rich are wealthy. Nevertheless, the funds they had 'did not live up to their promise.'
